

NIH grants funded using rodent or domestic species as models<sup>1</sup>
Years	Grants reviewed	Grants funded using rodents as models	Grants funded using domestic species as models	Percent of total grants funded using domestic species models
2002	8842	3328	79	2.3
2003	10865	3898	83	2.1
2004	13525	3947	64	1.6
2005	14877	3524	52	1.5
2006	16582	2262	37	1.6

<sup>1</sup>Data based on CRISP search by NIH staff (conducted August 2007). Rodents included mouse, rat, hamster, guinea pig, rabbit and gerbil, whereas domestic species included cow, pig, sheep, horse, chicken, turkey, duck and goat.