

Teach, learn, and grow with FoodCorps in Michigan

About FoodCorps

FoodCorps is a justice organization that works at the intersection of the food and education systems. We partner with schools and communities to nourish kids' health, education, and sense of belonging so that every child, in every school, experiences the joy and power of food. Our goal is that by 2030, every child will have access to food education and nourishing food in school.

What You'll Do

With FoodCorps, you'll spend a year teaching kids about food in gardens, cafeterias, and classrooms. You'll collaborate with educators, school nutrition leaders, and community members to support access to nourishing food. Best of all, you'll build connections with a network of passionate school food champions.

Your service year is a full-time, 11-month commitment from August to July. You can choose one of two tracks:

Food Education

You'll work alongside educators to teach kids about food in gardens, classrooms, and cafeterias.

School Nutrition

You'll work alongside school nutrition professionals to promote nourishing school food environments.

What are the Benefits?

You'll receive:

Living Stipend

$33,000 for the full 11-month term

Segal AmeriCorps Education Award

An award of $7,395, available after completion of your service term, for repaying qualified student loans and paying current educational expenses at eligible institutions of higher education and training programs

Health Insurance

Health, dental, and vision coverage

Professional Development

A year's worth of trainings—and a passionate community of peers—to prepare you for a career in food education, school nutrition, policy, or another relevant field
